Introduction

India has the world's oldest and largest traditional system of medicine. Indian system of medicine includes various systems such as Ayurveda, Siddha, Unani, Homeopathy, Yoga and Naturopathy. India has great traditional knowledge on herbal medicine and vast plant biodiversity. Indian herbal market is one of the growing market because government set up herbal farm clusters for improving quality of drugs and promotion of exports, cultivation of medicinal plants and effective marketing of herbal products.

Amla Powder

Embelica officinalis commonly known as Amla or Indian Gooseberry or Nelli is an important crop in India with high medicinal value.

There is good demand of the Herbal medicinal product. The dried fruits of E.ribes are used in decoction for fevers and for diseases of the chest and skin. They are also used for ringworm and other skin diseases. It is also used for coughs and diarrhoea. According to the report of W.H.O, over 80% world population relies on traditional medicine largely plant base, for primary healthcare. Unfortunately, Indias share in the global medicinal plants export trade is just 0.5%.

Amla extract is derived from the plant species known as Emblica officinalis, and falls under the category of super fruit. Amla or Indian gooseberry is a fruit indigenous to the Indian subcontinent. Due to rise in demand for amla extract, Emblica officinalis is currently grown commercially in various regions of the world. Amla contains a high amount of salt, carbohydrates, iron, phosphorous, calcium, vitamins and amino acids. Primarily, amla extract are available in powder and pulp forms. Extract is primarily used to manufacture cosmetic products and ayurvedic medicines for cognitive effects, as anti-oxidants, in ulcer and diabetes prevention and offers anti-inflammatory benefits as well. In addition, it is also used to manufacture various beauty products and health foods. Amla is particularly effective for hair care, such as to prevent hair loss and to enhance texture.

The amla extract market is poised to grow at a healthy CAGR due to the various ongoing research and development initiatives.

Triphala Powder

Triphala is a polyherbal Ayurvedic medicine which combines the power of Indian gooseberry or amalaki; baheda or bibhitaki; and chebulic myrobalan or haritaki.

Today, with increasing awareness about health and side effects of allopathic medicines, using kitchen herbs, spices, and condiments for treatment is becoming an increasingly attractive option. One of the many home remedies recommended by Ayurveda for many simple day-to-day problems is Triphala churna.

The herbs are antimicrobial and stimulate circulation in gums, while the calcium and trace minerals help to rebuild tooth enamel.

Herbal oils, also called plant oils, represent combined fraction of fat soluble (liposoluble) ingredients obtained from seeds, fruits, flowers, roots, bark or leaves. They contain wide range of components such as fatty acids, vitamins and vitamin-like compounds, antioxidants, phytosterols, carotenoids and other nutrients. Plant oils are utilized in food, personal care products and herbal medicines since prehistoric times.

Hair oil is a most common commodity used everywhere. The demand of perfume based herbal oil is visible from the rural area to cosmopolitan cities. The ladies used it for both its functional purpose as well as a beauty care commodity. The demand is increasing at par with the awareness of hair care, advertisement messages in different media, satellite TV channels, and enhancement of purchasing power of the individuals. At the same time, herbal Hair oil is having export worthiness too. The Indian market for hair care is estimated at more than Rs.1000 crores and herbal hair oil is an important part of it.

Herbal hair oil manufacturing is a very relevant business idea in the present circumstances when people are very much aware of their appearance and personality as well. From eight to eighty, everybody needs hair oil to keep their hair healthy and manageable but herbal hair oil has a great significance to nourish our hair and treat many hair related issues like hair fall, hair growth, and dandruff, hair graying and much other. In fact, it contains variety of herbal ingredients like Amla, Bahera and Harar dry fruits, Brahmi plants, Aleovera juice, Mehendi leaves, lemon oil, almond oil, olive oil etc. Either single or along with the two or more ingredients are mixed with base oils like coconut, sesame or castor oils to produce different types of herbal hair oils.

Indian herbal market is registering an extremely significant growth. The world herbal trade has grown to $120 billion and is expected to reach $7 trillion by 2050. India is stated to have 45,000 plant species (nearly 20% of the global species) occurs in the Indian sub-continent. Out of these, about 4,500 species of both higher and lower plant groups are of medicinal value. The states which are major producer of herbal plants having the highest medicinal value include Gujarat, Rajasthan, Haryana, Tamil Nadu, Andhra and the Himalayan Range.

Indian consumers are increasingly transitioning towards herbal and natural offerings, especially in analgesics, cold, cough and allergy (hay fever) remedies and dermatologicals. More consumers are becoming health and hygiene conscious due to the prevailing health and wellness trend in the country.

The market for herbal products has increased from INR ~ billion in FY'2011 to INR ~ billion in FY'2016, growing at a CAGR of ~% during the period. The huge marketing and promotional activities by the herbal companies and rising awareness about benefits of using herbal products has accelerated the size of the industry.

There is more recognition for herbal products in the country now than the past few decades. Thus herbal products are becoming popular day-by-day and demand for its usage is increasing not only in the country but also worldwide, the inherent quality of herbal treatment of having negligible side/ after effects has made great potential for its production. A large number of medicinal plants, herbs, shrubs etc. are available in our country in the hilly / forest regions.
